In August 24th, Nike will launch its third generation HTM Flyknit Series in Shanghai. HTM is the trend of Master Fragment Design founder Teng Yuan Hao and Nike design legend Tinker Hatfield (Tinker Hatfield) and Nike CEO and designer Mark Parke (Mark Parker) the long-term cooperation between the series, is to create a breakthrough performance, new technology and to change the manufacturing methods of commemorative shoes. The new colour scheme is the main feature of this series, and Nike Flyknit technology has been pushed forward by showcasing the possibilities of fabric, color and pattern. This series of HTM Trainer+ a total of six dazzling color, four of which are woven by classic color, black, blue, red and Ying Guanghuang, and the Swoosh logo on the heel of the decoration. In addition, the two features are the color of the vamp, through the original classic yarn mixed and staggered weaving to achieve a variety of color effects. This method combines different colors into a complex, fine and changing fabric pattern. The resulting bold color uppers also show the accuracy and complexity of knitting techniques. Nike's unique Lunarlon cushioning system makes HTM Trainer+ perfect, and the sleek Lunarlon white sole makes a series of designs for all shoe styles. Third generations of HTM Flyknit series of all six colors will be on August 24th in Shanghai I.T. Xintiandi store limited sale, the proposed retail price RMB 1399.
